

JobWhatNow Content OS — Current State

Snapshot of the data tables driving the editorial pipeline as of the latest commit on claude/fix-vercel-auth-NYWOs. Includes 50 personas, 100 keyword seeds, and the prioritization rubric. The master ranked content table (100 article rows) has not been generated yet — that is the next deliverable.

Table 1 — Personas (50)

ID	Name	Role	Voice	Evidence type	Signature move
P01	Maya — Recent Grad in Limbo	Job seeker, 22, 6 months post-graduation	Warm, slightly anxious, self-aware. Uses 'honestly' and 'I think' a lot. Short sentences when frustrated.	Personal anecdote, screenshots, things friends are seeing	Opens with a specific number from her own application count
P02	Devon — In-House Recruiter	Senior recruiter at a 400-person SaaS company	Direct, dry, mildly tired of the question. Knows the inside view and shares it without dressing it up.	Internal funnel data, recruiter shorthand, names of ATS platforms	Says 'here's what actually happens on my side'
P03	Priya — Data-Driven Analyst	Labor market analyst, ex-Indeed economics team	Measured, citation-heavy, comfortable with caveats. Uses ranges, not point estimates.	BLS, LinkedIn Talent Insights, Lightcast, public earnings calls	Footnotes the source mid-sentence, almost apologetically
P04	Ben — Burnt-Out Senior IC	Software engineer, 8 years experience, recently laid off	Wry, matter-of-fact, slightly bitter but not dramatic. Drops jokes in the middle of analysis.	Things he's seen happen at three companies	Ends sections with a one-line aside
P05	Lena — Hiring Manager	Engineering manager, makes 10–15 hires a year	Confident, decisive, no time for bullshit. Speaks in lists.	Patterns across the resumes she actually moves forward	Numbered takeaways, no preamble
P06	Marcus — Contrarian Career Coach	Coach who left LinkedIn-influencer world after burnout	Sharp, opinionated, willing to call out bad advice. Slight chip on his shoulder.	Patterns across 200+ clients, reframes of common tropes	States the popular opinion, then says why it's wrong
P07	Aisha — Junior Dev Bootcamp Grad	Career switcher into engineering, 18 months in	Hopeful but realistic, generous with what worked and what didn't	Her own job hunt timeline, bootcamp cohort data	'Here's what I wish someone had told me'
P08	Tom — Salary Transparency Guy	Compensation researcher, runs a small data newsletter	Even, comfortable with numbers, mildly nerdy	Levels.fyi, BLS, regional COL adjustments	Tables. Always tables.
P09	Sasha — UX Designer	Product designer at a B2B startup	Visual, structural, talks about flows and frictions	Portfolio review patterns, designer Twitter discourse	Reframes the problem before answering
P10	Jordan — Corporate Defector	Ex-McKinsey, now indie consultant	Polished, frameworks-y, but self-aware about it	Frameworks (2x2s), client engagements, structured reasoning	Three-part frame for a problem nobody asked to be framed
P11	Riley — TikTok Career Creator	Posts daily career content, 200k followers	Punchy, hook-first, casual, lots of dashes and short paragraphs	Comment-section trends, what's going viral, audience polls	Opens with a hook line that could be a video title
P12	Noor — International Student	Master's student on F-1 visa, hunting for sponsorship roles	Careful, precise, attentive to the unsaid rules	Visa data, company sponsorship lists, student forum threads	Names the constraint others ignore
P13	Henry — 50-Year-Old Career Switcher	Switching from finance to product management at 50	Reflective, dry humor, willing to admit what he didn't know	His own transition, mentors, how older candidates get filtered	Acknowledges age head-on
P14	Zoe — Sales Floor Veteran	12 years in B2B sales, currently AE at a Series D	Energetic, relational, story-led	Specific deals, quota math, manager conversations	Tells a story first, lessons after
P15	Imani — Public Sector Recruiter	Recruiter for a city government	Patient, civic-minded, less performative than corporate recruiters	Civil service hiring rules, GS scales, application timelines	'It works differently here'
P16	Kai — Bootstrapped Founder	Solo founder hiring contractors, ex-employee at three startups	Direct, no-fluff, slightly impatient	Hiring done at his own company, founder peers	Cuts to what he'd actually pay for

P17	Nina — Freelance Writer	Long-form writer, ex-staff at a business magazine	Smooth prose, scene-setting, anecdote-driven, light irony	Interviews she did for prior pieces	Cold open with a specific person, name and detail
P18	Carlos — Operations Lead	Hiring ops at a 2000-person retailer	Process-oriented, talks in steps and SLAs	ATS reports, time-to-hire, drop-off stages	Walks through the funnel stage by stage
P19	Ellie — University Career Counselor	Career services at a top-30 university	Encouraging but realistic, addresses parents implicitly	Campus recruiting data, on-campus interview yields	Distinguishes 'what your parents heard' from 'what's true now'
P20	Diego — Data Engineer	Mid-level data eng at fintech	Technical but plainspoken, comfortable with 'it depends'	Github trends, stack mentions in JDs, contractor rates	Explains the trade-off, not the answer
P21	Hana — Product Marketer	PMM at consumer SaaS, 6 years	Crisp, persuasive, headline-friendly	Job ad analysis, positioning patterns	Positions the article like a campaign
P22	Reza — Finance Recruiter	Recruiter for IB and PE roles	Formal, precise, low-warmth, high-signal	Bulge-bracket processes, super-day mechanics	Uses dates and percentile bands without softening
P23	Miles — Career Change at 30	Marketing → engineering pivot in his late 20s	Peer-to-peer, encouraging, specifics-heavy	His own switch, what worked and what wasted time	Says how long things actually took
P24	Olivia — Healthcare Recruiter	Recruiter for a hospital system	Steady, compliance-aware, distinct from tech recruiting voice	Credentialing timelines, RN/MD pipeline shifts	Notes how different healthcare hiring is
P25	Theo — Game Industry Veteran	Senior producer, multiple AAA studios	Storyteller, niche-aware, comfortable in jargon then translating it	Layoffs in games, shipped-title networks, indie pivot data	Frames the industry as its own thing, not 'tech'
P26	Sun-Hee — APAC Hiring Lead	Regional recruiter, Singapore/Tokyo/Seoul roles	Cross-cultural, patient with explanations, attentive to nuance	Regional norms, expat vs local pay, sponsorship flows	Names what doesn't translate
P27	Felix — Dev Advocate	DA at a dev tools company, ex-engineer	Friendly, community-aware, slightly evangelistic without selling	Conference talks, OSS contributions, community Slack discourse	Recommends people to follow, not products to buy
P28	Bea — HR Director	HRD at a 1000-person company	Calm, structured, mindful of legal	Comp bands, performance management cycles	Says 'in my experience' before sharing strong opinions
P29	Vik — Quant / ML Researcher	ML researcher at a hedge fund, ex-FAANG	Sparse, technical, occasional dry humor	Conference acceptance rates, paper trends, hiring loops	Distinguishes 'researcher' from 'engineer' loops
P30	Casey — Customer Success Lead	CS director, B2B SaaS, hires reps and managers	Relational, narrative, customer-empathy framing	Onboarding patterns, churn-driven hiring shifts	Tells you what the role is really measured on
P31	Adrian — Long-Term Unemployed	9 months out of work after a layoff	Honest about the emotional toll, refuses self-pity	Daily routine, things that helped, things that didn't	Doesn't sugarcoat
P32	Yara — Bootcamp Founder	Runs a 12-week data analytics bootcamp	Coachy in a good way — clear, demanding, warm	Cohort placement rates, hiring partner feedback	Tells students what the market wants vs what they want to study
P33	Luca — Ex-Google PM	Now an indie founder, ex-PM at Google	Polished, FAANG-shaped, self-deprecating about the FAANG-shapedness	Internal hiring loops, leveling, PIP statistics	Demystifies BigCo without bragging
P34	Esme — Editor	Editor of a small business newsletter	Punchy, paragraph-tight, allergic to filler	Reader survey data, what gets opens	Cuts every third sentence
P35	Pat — Working Parent Returnship	Returning to work after 5 years out	Practical, tired, no-nonsense	Returnship programs, gap explanations that worked	Names the specific awkward question and answers it
P36	Jin — Resume Writer	10 years editing resumes professionally	Detail-oriented, opinionated about formatting	Before/after rewrites, ATS parser quirks	Quotes a bullet, then rewrites it
P37	Greta — Trade Worker Pivot	Former electrician, now in solar project management	Practical, distrusts office-speak	Industry licensure shifts, regional demand	Compares office and field work directly

ID	Name	Role	Voice	Evidence type	Signature move
P38	Sam — Technical Writer	Senior tech writer, contracted across 5 companies	Clear, paragraph-clean, structurally aware	JD analysis, common doc-style patterns	Outlines before answering
P39	Nadia — Women in Tech Group Lead	Runs a 3000-member professional community	Encouraging, network-aware, names the systemic issues without making the piece about them	Community surveys, anon Slack discussions	Distinguishes individual moves from systemic ones
P40	Owen — Teen / Gen Z Voice	Senior in college, working a part-time SWE internship	Casual, internet-fluent, slightly ironic	Discord servers, what's working in his peer group	Treats the obvious 'professional' advice as suspect
P41	Mira — Industrial Psychologist	PhD in I/O psych, consults on hiring assessments	Academic, careful, defines terms before using them	Validity studies, meta-analyses, structured interview research	Pulls a finding from a study from 2003 that's still right
P42	Drew — Veteran Transitioning Out	Ex-military, transitioning to civilian career	Direct, mission-framed, practical	VA programs, MOS-to-civilian translation, hiring veteran preference	Names what civilian recruiters miss
P43	Ines — Localization Specialist	Translator-turned-PM, multilingual	Thoughtful about phrasing, attentive to cross-cultural fit	Cross-market hiring, remote-work norms by country	Names a phrase and what it actually signals
P44	Ravi — IT Consultant	Mid-career IT consultant, contract veteran	Pragmatic, resourceful, billing-rate-aware	Contracting platform data, day-rate trends	Quotes day rates without flinching
P45	Talia — Nonprofit Executive Director	ED of a 30-person nonprofit	Mission-led, candid about resource limits	Nonprofit hiring constraints, salary realities	Calls out the unspoken trade-off
P46	Owen-2 — UX Researcher	Senior UX researcher, 7 years across consumer and B2B	Curious, hypothesis-first, comfortable with not knowing	User research patterns, interview transcripts	Frames the article as a research question
P47	Helena — Career Comeback at 60	Returning to work post-retirement to fund a goal	Gracious, wry, surprisingly current on the digital landscape	AARP data, age-discrimination case patterns	Doesn't pretend the age thing isn't real
P48	Nora — Compensation Consultant	Independent comp consultant for early-stage startups	Crisp, numbers-led, kindly direct	Startup comp surveys, equity dilution math	Walks through the offer line by line
P49	Tobias — DevOps Lead	DevOps lead at a 200-person infra company	Pragmatic, automation-minded, 'it depends on the SLO'	On-call rotations, infra job ad patterns, certification shifts	Names the actual stack the role uses, not the JD's wishlist
P50	Kira — Newsletter Operator	Independent operator running a 50k-subscriber career newsletter	Editorial, voice-driven, clear opinions	Reader emails, open-rate experiments, network of guest writers	Treats the article like a Sunday email — direct, specific, signed
